Lack of Milk Kills Babies

This is the 12th chapter of "The Strangers," a searching report on the plight of B.C.'s native Indians.

By G. E. MORTIMORE

Many Indian children die because of their parents' ignorance.

Canada has a high infant mortality rate among the countries of the world, because of its scattered population, the difficulty of calling a doctor in time, and the rigorous life that many rural Canadians live. Infant deaths among Indians are the highest of all.

Malnutrition, crowding and exposure all contribute to the death-rate. Thousands of Indian mothers unknowingly kill their babies because they can not or will not learn how to feed them.

Only Two

There is a trend to bottle-feeding among Indian mothers. Nurses try to persuade mothers to revert to breast-feeding. "But Indian women tend to follow the advertisements rather than our advice," a nurse said. "Bottle-feeding gives them more liberty. The less educated ones absorb only a part of what they read. So the child gets only one or two bottles a day instead of eight."

In many Indian backyards there are mountains of pop bottles but few if any empty tomato juice tins or grapefruit rinds: silent evidence of poor nutrition.

"Our field nurses try to explain that babies are better brought up on a proper nursing formula than given a bottle of pop and a chocolate bar," an Indian Health Services doctor told me.

Why Teeth Rot

The heavy consumption of pop and candy is one reason for the rotted teeth that are seen in a number of small Indian children. Now there are five IHS dentists in B.C., repairing the teeth of school-age children and hospital patients free of charge.

Tied for first place among causes of Indian deaths in B.C., according to 1956 figures, were accidents and pneumonia, 233.2 per 100,000 each. Diseases of early infancy, 221.6, ranked third.

Deadly Accidents

Across Canada, accidents are the second largest cause of Indian deaths—partly because so many Indians are in hazardous occupations like logging and fishing, and partly—some observers believe—because there is a higher proportion of heavy drinkers among Indians. But the last claim has not been proved.

Among the slanders often repeated by whites is that Indians

Victim of Bear?

Searchers at Willow River near Prince George are still going sleepless as they continue to press the hunt for two-year-old Cindy Lou MacLane, who disappeared last Tuesday from her home. It is feared she may have been killed by a bear. Police said the search will go on at least until tonight when the "position will be reconsidered."

Hunting Accident Kills City Boy, 14

A 14-year-old Victoria boy was shot and killed by his brother-in-law in a hunting accident near the Grouse Nest resort yesterday.

Police did not disclose the boy's name.

Sooke RCMP said the boy was hunting with his father and his brother-in-law about one-quarter of a mile north of Grouse Nest and just west of Glespie Road.

The boy was crossing one end of a large fern bed. The brother-in-law was crossing the other. The brother-in-law said he saw something resembling a deer and he fired. The boy dropped dead.

The tragedy happened about 2.45 p.m.

Arkansans Fear Arrest

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—

Two segregationist leaders declared Saturday that the federal government is planning to arrest 31 persons—and possibly Gov. Orval Faubus—in the Little Rock integration case.

A spokesman at the U.S. district attorney's office here called it "nonsense."

Amis Guthridge, Capital Citizens Council attorney, and the Rev. Wesley Pruden, a Baptist minister, and council president said the government planned to invoke an injunction issued last year on which to base the arrests.

Too Much Pop, Too Little Milk Ruins Indian Tots

The provincial division of VD control says that there appears to be no foundation for such a belief.

"I think it would be a fair statement to say that among our Indian population as a whole the rate of venereal disease is not significantly higher than among the white population," says Dr. A. A. Larsen, director of the VD control division.

In 1957 there were 403 cases of gonorrhoea reported as having occurred amongst Indians of B.C. as compared to 3,230 against the white population; and another 118 cases in which the physician indicated that the patient was a half-breed. But the racial origin ascribed to the patient is often guesswork, and can not be used as a basis for statistical analysis.

SURVEY ENDED

The VD control division carried out mass blood tests of groups of Indians. "The number of cases of syphilis that we discovered through these tests was not disproportionately high and in recent years we have not felt it worthwhile to continue this type of survey."

Provincial public health service and Indian Health Services co-operate in VD control. "Their nurses are very active in locating and treating contacts whom we name. Conversely they pass on information about non-Indians to us."

GOOD PROGRAM

"In general their program is a good one, particularly when one considers the difficulties that their field staff experience in reaching the remote areas of the province where some of these people live."

"It is not uncommon for an Indian Health nurse to travel all day to reach a small settlement only to find that the person she is looking for has left the day before. The search must then be begun all over again."

Although the VD rate among Indians does not appear to be higher than average, says Dr. Larsen, "in some areas such as Prince George, Prince Rupert, Kamloops, Vancouver and in a few smaller centres such as Alert Bay there are pockets of highly promiscuous Indian girls whose rate of infection is very high indeed."

18 DIFFERENT GIRLS

"Our nurse in Prince George reported to me that 80 per cent of the men in that area who acquire gonorrhoea give the names of not more than 18 different girls. Of these half are of Indian extraction."

The only real VD control problem lies in the groups of these girls are often not legally the responsibility of Indian Health Services and have in effect, white status," says Dr. Larsen. The responsibility of IHS ends when an Indian becomes enfranchised, or has been absent from the reserve for more than a year.

FROM SMALL TOWNS

"In most cases these girls come from... small towns... (They) prefer to live the life that they are doing in our larger cities rather than return to their own homes. They are not prostitutes in the usual sense of the term since, in most instances, they ask nothing for their favors other than food or shelter."

"Those of us who work with this group know that something needs to be done to help them, although I am afraid I have no definite suggestions as to how this might be done."

Health problems are human problems. But doctors and nurses are too busy to assume the functions of social workers and clergymen, although they sometimes try."

THREE HOSPITALS

British Columbia's three Indian hospitals, at Nanaimo, Sardis and Miller Bay, are each the administrative centre of a large zone. Nanaimo is zone headquarters for all Vancouver Island and part of the Mainland coast in Kwakwakwala and Bella Coola agencies.

Patients from all over B.C. go to Sardis for lung surgery and to Nanaimo for treatment of tuberculosis of the bone.

Each hospital has its photo laboratory, which processes 10,000 films a year brought in by traveling X-ray clinics.

Under control of Nanaimo are four health centres and clinics at Duncan, Tofino, Alert Bay and Nootka. Where no IHS nurses are stationed, arrangements have been made for provincial public health authorities to carry on the work. Such arrangements exist in Saanich, Nanaimo, Port Alberni, Comox and Campbell River.

Indian Health Services doctors, nurses and X-ray technicians operate in some of the wildest and most inaccessible regions of B.C., from the Rocky Mountain Trench to the Queen Charlottes and the west coast of Vancouver Island.

They are hard-working, self-reliant men and women. To learn something about their job, I rode with a traveling X-ray clinic for two days into the Chilcotin country west of Williams Lake.

Tempers Flare at Tory Rally

Labor Issue 'Dodged'

By PETER BRUTON
Colonist Staff Reporter

VANCOUVER—Conservatives yesterday refused to adopt a "get tough with labor" policy.

Only a relatively small number of delegates to this Conservative leadership convention were on hand to discuss resolutions calling for compulsory arbitration, that civil servants may have the right to strike, and that the minister of labor may terminate any conciliation proceedings by ordering an immediate vote on strike or lockout.

"This performance today has been childish, frightening and shocking," declared John Moore of Comox-Alberni.

TERMINATE CONCILIATION

A resolution was passed to the effect that where a conciliation officer considers it obvious that either or both sides in a dispute are determined to force the issue to the brink of a strike or lockout the minister of labor may terminate conciliation proceedings and direct an immediate vote on strike or lockout.

Oak Bay delegate Justin Hardwick speaking to the resolution, said some union leaders have a tendency to take a strike vote when they have no intention of allowing a strike.

HOLDING CLUB

This, he said, was holding a club over employers during the negotiation period and was contrary to the present Labor Relations Act, to the ordinary concept of reason, and is not in the public interest."

Another delegate, however, said the resolution "smacks of totalitarianism" but the delegates present approved the move.

"The support of Dr. Kidd and the support of everyone of his followers I urgently need and hereby accept. I hope when we march into the legislature of British Columbia Dr. Kidd will be right there beside me."

Mr. Finlayson declared that from the moment of his re-election "I ceased to be a leader just of my odd followers, at that time I became leader of all Conservatives in B.C."

"I will try with every ounce of energy at my command," he thundered, "to fulfill the hopes and trust of all delegates."

An anti-climax to the leadership convention was the naming of officers of the B.C. Progressive Conservative Association at the annual meeting.

Allan Ainsworth of Vancouver was named new president, successor to Gowan Guest, who now is private secretary to Prime Minister John Diefenbaker.

Whither Tories? Split?

Every Vote
Needed

VANCOUVER (CP)—The sudden illness of a delegate threw the provincial Progressive Conservative convention into a bit of a tizzy yesterday.

The meeting, sensing a photo-finish, spent an hour deciding what to do with his vote when ballots were cast for a new leader.

Oliver Rutan of Port Alberni suffered a heart seizure and was taken to hospital. He voted by proxy.

VANCOUVER—Whither Tories? That was the question in the corridors and smoke-filled rooms of the Hotel Vancouver last night following Deane Finlayson's narrow victory over Dr. Desmond Kidd in the thrilling fight for the leadership of the Progressive Conservatives.

Reporters searched high and low for signs of a split in the party. There was bitterness but no sign of a split.

"Naturally we were sure of victory," said a Finlayson supporter. "Kidd put up a tremendous battle, let's admit it, and the only result is that we have to convince the people of B.C. that we're not split down the middle."

"We're disappointed," said a Kidd supporter, "but truthfully we did a lot better than we expected. We can do nothing but throw our support behind this man, who, through democratic process, has won the majority vote."

Both sides felt it would have been better for one man or the other to have chalked up a staggering victory — for the party's sake.

But the result followed a political pattern in B.C. in 1938. R. C. Maitland beat out Herbert Anscombe for the leadership of the Conservative party by 31 votes.

In 1947 Gordon Wismer was beaten by boss Johnston for the leadership of the Liberal party by five votes.

And in 1952 the now Premier Bennett beat out the now Highways Minister P. A. Gagliardi for the leadership of the Social Credit party by one vote.

It was close yesterday, a lot closer than anyone expected.

AGAINST RESOLUTION

Robert B. Anderson of Victoria, who said he agreed that the government workers should have all the rights of other unionists, spoke against the resolution because he felt the time was not opportune.

"At the present time it is possible for a foreign power to control trade unions," he said.

There was therefore a chance, he added, that if the civil servants were given these rights "foreign powers could control the civil service of B.C."

HOTTEST DEBATE

The move of compulsory arbitration sparked the hottest debate with speakers arguing that the resolution affected one of the greatest civil rights in the country.

"If we are going to take away the right to strike we will have to give them (unions) something else in its place," said Fergie Brown, MP for Vancouver-Kingsway.

Harry McQuillan, MP for Comox, said that 207 Conservatives were elected to the House of Commons on a platform strongly opposed to compulsory arbitration.

RESOLUTION TABLED

The resolution was tabled. Others passed included a policy statement that the Conservative party supports every possible action to encourage the employment and retention of highly-qualified, capable civil servants and that it adopts the principle of top salaries and working conditions for highly-qualified, capable civil servants.

HOLDING CLUB

This, he said, was holding a club over employers during the negotiation period and was contrary to the present Labor Relations Act, to the ordinary concept of reason, and is not in the public interest."

Another delegate, however, said the resolution "smacks of totalitarianism" but the delegates present approved the move.

Mr. Finlayson, who called the leadership convention last April when it appeared certain he would win, was nervous yesterday morning.

"Spilling his coffee in his saucer, he referred caustically to the "high-priced Ontario

"We'll work with Deane and the Conservative Party which is up to him," said the Kidd follower. "If he cuts his own throat that's up to him."

The young Conservatives 99 per cent of whom had actively campaigned for Dr. Kidd were worried.

"Finlayson will see that our throats are cut from ear to ear," said one. "We worked hard and we lost, that's the fortunes of such a battle, but now we're really on the outs."

Not so, replied the Finlayson supporters, we're happy and glad to have any support that is offered.

"I know that whatever happens you will say that the provincial Conservatives are split right down the middle," Deane Finlayson told this reporter two hours before the votes were counted.

We hope not, for the sake of the Kidd camp.

As indeed the Kidd camp had done.

George McLean, former Toronto newspaperman and now a public relations and advertising executive who works for Justice Minister Davie Fulton, did a tremendous job of organization for his candidate. Six votes would have swung it his way.

Those six votes could have been lost through a variety of reasons, and there is little use of trying to determine exactly where.

Post-mortems were the order of the day in the Hotel Vancouver last night.

But the thing that worried both sides is the closeness of the race, and the effect this will have on the people of B.C. when they read the result of the voting.

A Permanent Attraction

THE dreams of many Victorians came true on Saturday when the handsome new wing of the Victoria Art Gallery, constructed as a community-wide Centennial project, was opened formally. To Miss Sara Spencer, who deeded the site of the property which began it; Mr. Colin Graham, the curator who worked indefatigably towards the rounding out of the project, and to other stalwarts who by their vision and earnestness helped to bring the new gallery into being unstinted credit is due. By united action in supporting the gallery wing—all four municipalities in the Greater Victoria region have together with the Province provided a most valuable asset to the community.

Quite apart from visiting and loan collections, the Victoria Art Gallery will serve as a rallying point for local artistic expression in all of the pictorial arts, a feature which has long been keenly desired. Its educational value for adults and children can hardly be over-estimated. The fact that upwards of 150 children are receiving instruction at the art centre every week carries a wealth of meaning. As essential in its own way, Victoria now will have something to put before its visitors that is not the duplication of anything else, but the cultural and individual expression of itself.

Minstrel of the North

ROBERT W. SERVICE was only briefly resident here, but it is the fashion to lay claim to famous men and his death in France recalls his connection with this city. This was at the turn of the century, when he was a bank clerk with his future unknown and the tales of the Yukon soudoughs yet unwritten. Before that however he had worked on a farm at Duncan, and his subsequent years in the northland set him firmly into the life and lore of this part of Western Canada.

Robert Service never claimed the mantle of true poetry, but his verse went all round the world. Any present-day poet who could command a return of a half-million dollars for the creation of a character like "Dan McGrew" might well envy the bard of the gold rush trail. The money aside, he depicted an era of pioneer days in a fashion that caught and held public imagination, with gusto and fidelity and the lilt of authentic minstrelsy. Without him much of the rich flavor of the Yukon at its most tempestuous epoch would have been lost. Even today the pulse responds to the verve of his verse.

Service had a varied and venturesome career after he left the Yukon. He served finely with a Red Cross ambulance unit in the first war and put lasting impressions of that service in rhyme. He had experience as a war correspondent and as an intelligence officer. He wrote books of prose as well as of verse, and lived a full life to the ripe age of 84 years. But it is "Sam McGee," the "Lady known as Lou," and all the other legendary figures of the Yukon trail that will remain as his chief legacy and as reflecting the particular niche he carved for himself in the world.

Robert Service has long since become part of the colorful history of the Northwest, and his death is a reminder of the acknowledgment that will long be due his memory.

Bombs and Weather

IT all depends on where you sit. The British Isles have had a terrible summer this year, with almost incessant rain; and Quebec's summer is said to have been nothing to write home about either, except maybe in terms of complaint. So a Canadian professor who has been living in England since summer began suggests that hydrogen bomb tests may be the cause of it all. But how would he account for the magnificent summer experienced this year along the west coast of North America?

Around these parts 1957 was written off as the year without a summer. As rainy day succeeded gloomy day people began to say much the same things as Professor W. H. Parker of Manitoba is now saying in England—blame the atom bombs for everything unpleasant. But if nuclear explosions were responsible for bad weather in 1957, what caused the good weather in 1958, a year in which there were more hydrogen bombs set off than before?

That is not to say that Professor Parker is all wet, figuratively as well as literally. There may be something in what he suggests. As to what "causes weather" there is no pat answer. Some scientists incline to his belief, or at any rate are not prepared to dismiss it simply because proof is absent. Others maintain that the energy released by a nuclear explosion is puny compared with that generated by an ordinary lightning storm. As Professor Parker suggests, there is an interesting and perhaps rewarding field here for study, which—heaven forbid—might in the end give science mastery over the weather.

Island Editors Say

Untenable Position

Prohibition failed and it has been apparent for years that the Indian Act as it pertains to liquor is a failure. Recent unpleasant incidents here and in other parts of the country can be traced to the fact that a race of people has been placed in an untenable position in regard to liquor.

Those trying to enforce the laws must agree that there is something radically wrong. Admitting that liquor is a curse, we also have to admit that it is here to stay. Laws discriminating between different peoples in the same country as regards its consumption only serve to emphasize the problem.

Why prohibition should work for the Indian when it never worked for the rest of the population is a question that would be hard to answer.

Save 'Almanac'

Decision to dispense with "Almanac," the special features program on CBUT-TV which follows the evening news telecast, has come as a shock to a number of residents who value its educational work. What lies behind the decision is not clear at this moment. Production difficulties of some kind are obviously responsible.

Those who wish to see Almanac retained should write to CBUT, Vancouver, without delay and give their reasons. The program has always seemed very suitable for children and the general nature of its contents carries a wide appeal.

Economic Climate

Mr. George Home, secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation of Labor, in an address to the Vancouver Rotary Club, has come up with a point that we can go along with. Mr. Home has called on the government to set up a "conference broad enough to examine the whole economic climate of B.C."

In our opinion there are certain prerequisites necessary to create the right atmosphere

A New Industry

It was evident at the re-opening meeting of the Ladysmith Boat Owners' Association that some people are taking a rather narrow view of the new boat basin which is being constructed in Ladysmith Harbor. Some members made it clear that if they find the boat basin filled with commercial fishing boats and there is no room for them to moor their own boats, they will have no further interest.

The fact of the matter is, if that should happen the people of Ladysmith will benefit much more than they would if they were granted private mooring space for their boats. Thirty to 50 commercial fishermen making Ladysmith their home port would be the equivalent of a new industry.

We Are Progressing

With the re-opening of our schools, after what many experts now consider an unnecessary long summer interlude, some of the basic faults in our education methods will no doubt be the subject of still more intensive examination and discussion. A heartening sign of a swing away from the Dewey influence in the recent amendment to our School Act.

It is difficult to realize that previously a school board had no power to expel students who consistently raised hob and flouted authority in school, and that teachers had no power to administer punishment to the insolent or the indolent mischievous.

The burden of school taxes grows more onerous each year. The least we can expect is administrative machinery to ensure that everything possible shall be done to give the best possible return for our tremendous investment.

Thinking Aloud

... of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings.

By TOM TAYLOR

IT IS refreshing to read that in the H-bomb age navies should seek to settle their quarrels with dried cod and old potatoes. There is some hope for the world yet.

Some might see in this battle for the trawlers over Iceland way a sad come-down from the days of the Vikings or the Elizabethan freebooters to whom a potato was something to eat and not a weapon to fight a war with. Let us assume, however, that a sense of sanity coupled with humor is beginning to find a place in international dispute.

Here was drama fit for inclusion in the Sagas. Armed frigates and gun-boats moved menacingly around fog-shrouded fishing smacks, bent on either attack or defense. Boarding parties were poised ready to jump, and grim-faced crews stood in line to repel them. It was a scene to match any page from the scripts of belligerent sea history.

And then when the opposing vessels drew close the rivals pelted each other with smelly fish and mouldy spuds!

I doubt that Odin, if he were watching from above, gave out a loud cheer. He was an agriculturist and would appreciate the potatoes, even if in his day edibles were merely brought into operation at meal times. But he was a god of war and presided over the valhalla of those slain in battle.

However he was also a man of wisdom, it is said, and perhaps after a little reflection he clapped his hands in approval. Fashions are like measles, apt to be catching, and who knows but what cod and spuds may yet find themselves in the charter of the UN.

Some years ago a writer ventured to suggest an equally modest way of conducting wars. His idea was that picked teams of combatants should face up on a field armed only with bamboo sticks, and then go to it under the eye of an umpire.

He was young, however, and his elders laughed him to scorn.

Yet conceivably, granted a degree of common sense none too conspicuous at summit conferences, some such innocent method of settling international disputes could be recommended.

True enough this method isn't martial and no poems of glory could be written about it, but it would help to reduce the income tax. It would save lives, too, although that isn't a consuming ambition nowadays.

But if neither sticks nor spuds nor fish are popular there are still some hints we might pick up from the old-timers.

Battles of the long ago, of Viking or other vintage, admittedly were sanguinary affairs, almost as deadly as modern highways. Blood flowed in profusion, and not to make Red Cross plasma. But at least the protagonists observed certain regulations. For one thing they didn't fight around the clock, or round the week or month as combatants of the highly civilized twentieth century do.

No, they had a time-table and they stuck to it. They fought at most from dawn to dusk and then called it a day. Often enough indeed they went home immediately thereafter, and were none too keen on taking the field again without a good rest.

Perhaps their wives didn't like supper to be kept waiting.

They had another custom, these warriors of old. A chieftain wasn't above stepping out in front and offering to settle the quarrel by lone combat, himself and his opposite number. I don't suppose this sporting gesture would commend itself to our chieftains, but it's a thought.

It might cause them to look with favor on cold cod and old potatoes.

Adult Education in B.C.

Thousands Head Back to School

By ORMOND MARION

First of a series of three articles on opportunities for self-advancement provided by British Columbia's Education system.

THE next few weeks will be back-to-school time for thousands of Vancouver Island adults.

Some will attend classes because they never went to college, or didn't finish it, and realize that in today's world college-level learning is increasingly needed.

Some, aware to the fact that it's never too late to learn, will in effect go back to high school, pushing their way up to the higher education they didn't have a chance to gain, or perhaps even didn't see the value of gaining, in childhood.

Many more will take a variety of courses designed to help them make more money, to understand today's complex civilization better and to gain more pleasure from living in it, to do all sorts of do-it-yourself things with less damage to person and property, and to improve their use and enjoyment of leisure time.

MOST will take advantage of moderate-to-low fees in school board evening classes, the Victoria College evening division, and the education department's high school correspondence division, and some will take courses offered commercially.

British Columbians have a higher standard of education than Canadians in general—and Americans in general.

For many jobs today, especially in government service, a college degree is a prerequisite. But it is equally true that in almost all kinds of employment, the man or woman eager to continue his or her education will be most carefully watched for promotion.

And, according to educators, the person who continues his education of his own will receive far more out of it than the child sent to school by his parents or the young person going to university because it's the normal thing to do these days.

"A foolish fatacy has possessed the minds of many comparatively young people who have assumed that if they were over 30 years of age, and certainly if past 40, they would have poor chances for success in any line of directed study, such as a correspondence course," says a booklet on high-school correspondence courses.

"Nothing could be more fallacious and mischievous. Men and women in their 30s and 40s usually know very definitely what they wish to do, and this clear-cut purpose helps them in achieving it. Furthermore, their extensive experience gives them a sounder basis of judgment and a surer estimate of values than can be expected in younger students. There are no limits to the process of learning for most persons."

Chances for self-improvement are better now than ever before, and increasing numbers of adults every year are taking advantage of them.

Is Mao Calling the Tune?

(From The Montreal Gazette)

IT grows increasingly probable that Communist China is dictating to China.

Russia's declaration that she would back China in any attempt to regain Formosa is something far less than a spontaneous gesture of goodwill. It is more likely the result of terms dictated to Khrushchev by the Chinese leader, Mao Tse-tung, when Khrushchev went to Peking in August.

Indeed, it is even probable that Khrushchev was practically summoned to Peking in order to appease Mao. Khrushchev, in exploiting the Near East crisis, had done several

Attack on Public

Trade Unionism would never have achieved its present powerful position without the generous support of the general public, because that public appreciated the necessity of unionism to protect the workers from abuses. But the terrific power that trade unionism now possesses has gone to its head, and instead of the worker being at the mercy of the employer, the public is at the mercy of the unionist leaders, who, by calling strikes here, there and everywhere, jeopardize the very economy which supports us all.

When the long-suffering public begin to realize this, and show signs of withdrawing their support, unionist leaders immediately send up a wail in high heaven, that 1958 is the year of trade unionist attack on the general public.

Trade unionism, because of its terrific power, has attracted many of the gangster type in the U.S. Fortunately this does not appear to be the case in Canada, but unfortunately the ramifications of trade unionism are such that the undesirable elements in the U.S. too often call the tune for our workers.

Canadian trade unionists may well be advised to carefully study the overall picture, and by restricting their demands to fit in with the economic picture, do something about regaining the support of the general public, which eventually decides most issues.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A cross-section check showed Saturday that 10 out of 18 Republican candidates for the Senate who could be reached think Sherman Adams should resign as President Eisenhower's chief assistant.

Demands for Adams to go have increased since the Democrats defeated Republican Sen. Frederick G. Payne in Maine last Monday. Both Payne and Adams were friendly with Bernard Goldfine, Boston industrialist, and both acknowledged receiving favors and gifts from him.

Arrow Decision Puzzles Ottawa

By DAVE MCINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The government is facing one of the toughest military — economic — political decisions any Canadian administration has ever been called upon to make.

The question: Whether to order into full production the supersonic Arrow interceptor at an estimated cost of $2,000,000 over the next three years. This figure is $300,000,000 more than Canada's entire defence budget in the current fiscal year.

Competent sources have said such an expenditure could mean an increase in taxes.

The decision will have a far-reaching effect on Canada's defence posture and wide ramifications in industry.

Aero Aircraft Limited and Orenda Engines Limited, builders of the Arrow airframe and engine, respectively, employ some 10,000 workers, many of them skilled. Equipment orders for the Arrow involve some 650 sub-contractors.

The government, naturally enough, doesn't cherish the prospect of throwing 10,000 aircraft tradesmen on an already under-employed labor market. Neither does it want to cripple aeronautical research.

The navy and the army both need new equipment. The navy would like to obtain atomic submarines in the next few years and Defence Minister Pearkes himself has said re-equipping of the army must not long be delayed.

But could the government afford new equipment for the navy and army if it decided to spend $2,000,000,000 to re-equip the RCAF in Canada with the Arrow? Furthermore, could it afford to re-equip the 12 RCAF fighter squadrons in Europe?

German Navy Reborn

By CAY BROCKDORFF
United Press International

KIEL, Germany — Germany's navy, whose battleships and cruisers once ranked among the world's most powerful, has made a comeback.

The new West German fleet is a far cry from Adolf Hitler's mighty armada but approaches against Soviet attempts to move their vast number of submarines and cruisers into the open Atlantic, the German Navy is in waters where it is traditionally at home.

And the Germans who amazed the world more than two decades ago when they built their pocket battleships apparently are out to repeat even have six—the tiny warships can speed as fast as 45 knots, about as fast as an express train.

Adolf Hoff Johannesson, commander of the German fleet, said the small craft, powered by four Mercedes diesel engines totalling 12,000 horsepower, are capable of mining Russia's Baltic ports in one night.

the same ones who launched Germany's savage and damaging attacks on Allied shipping in the Second World War.

Apparently outmatched helplessly in its home waters — the Baltic Sea — by some 380 Soviet warships, West Germany's fleet commanders still think their 60 odd ships have the Russians worried more than they admit.

Assigned by NATO to defend the Baltic Sea's western quietly and with little fanfare, they are building small and versatile craft believed capable of outraging any other naval ship.

Designed especially to operate in the Baltic and North Seas, these small ships of 160 tons displacement — smaller than a river barge — pose a serious threat to Soviet naval power.

China Could Drag Russia And West into World War

By HARRY S. TRUMAN

I do not think there will be a war in the Pacific unless Red China launches it and the Soviet Union abets it. It is just that plain. The probing tactics of the Chinese Communists over Quemoy and Matsu are part of a reckless campaign to determine whether they can get full support from the Kremlin and whether we will stand up to their use of force to take over Quemoy, Matsu and Formosa.

The only role of our military forces in the Formosan Straits is to prevent any mad adventure which could set off a third world war. These forces are no threat to the Chinese people or any other people. We have no territorial ambitions there or elsewhere.

Until such time as there is absolute assurance that the Communists have abandoned their aim of territorial expansion, I cannot see that we have any other choice but to meet them and thwart them at every point where it is necessary.

It would be folly and dangerous for us to abandon Formosa to the Communists as long as they are aggression-minded.

For that reason, it is vital to protect Formosa as an important bastion — one of a number of such strategic bases the free world depends upon to safeguard the peace. Formosa could be the launching point for Communist assaults on the Philippines, Korea and Japan.

I think that part of the Red Chinese probing tactics is to engage in talks with us, and I would not discourage any such talks they wish to have. But we have had considerable experience with the kind of talks Red Chinese conduct.

We have only to recall the interminable talks over Korea, which resulted in no final solution, and the protracted ambassadorial negotiations in Geneva over release of American prisoners, again with no results.

Let us forget, Chiang Kai-shek was our ally during the Second World War. Stalin and Russia agreed to back his leadership of the Chinese people after long negotiations in Moscow, and Chiang Kai-shek helped with Russia's Stalin, Britain's Churchill, France's de Gaulle and the United States to set up the United Nations.

On the other hand, we cannot declare in advance, nor can we always anticipate, where it may become essential for us to draw a line and defend our position. We can do nothing to prevent the Communists from plotting and raiding, but we must always be prepared to stop them when, in the judgment of our allies and ourselves, they must be stopped in the interest of the security of the free world.

I go on hoping that one day what should be decided by talks and negotiations.

Whenever and wherever we are challenged by the Communists in their constant probing for weak spots in our determination to protect our freedom and the peace, we must meet that challenge resolutely, swiftly and as a united people.

We have seen what indecision, drifting and partisanship does to hurt our position in the Free world. We have only to look at the tragedy of Indo-China. The separation from us of our allies during the Suez crisis, and the bleak outlook in the Middle East until we took a stand.

One of the most important things at this time is to maintain the freedom of the great seas for all nations and to hold the line against any attempt by Russia and Red China to take over their neighbors. The situation in Quemoy and Matsu cannot be isolated into a local issue. It is part of a world crisis and should be treated as a major element in a global struggle for survival.

Women, Children Last

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — At least 21 persons, mainly women and children, are feared to have been drowned when a ferry boat with 60 on board sank in the Ganges River near Benares, northern India.

Most of the men on board swam to safety, but most of the women and children are feared to have died.

Crown Lashed After Acquittal

VANCOUVER (CP) — A lawyer representing two men who were acquitted after spending 76 days in jail awaiting trial on principle of the law that a man is innocent until proven guilty with the truth in his explanation of the delay.

Lawyer Larry Hill said he was "appalled" at statements made Thursday by prosecutor Stewart McMorrin to city police commission.

Accused in the case were Steve Cushing, 34, and Mike Sussmey, 44, Yugoslav immigrants arrested after a fracas June 25 in which Norwegian Karl Systad was severely injured.

The case was dismissed Tuesday on grounds of inadequate evidence against the pair. Mr. McMorrin told the commission, however, that because the charge was dismissed, "it does not necessarily mean they are two innocent men."

Blind Man's 'Sixth Sense' Helps Others Earn Living

By JACK FRY

A blind man, who says through mathematical training he can "see" images in his mind, is using his "sixth sense" to help nearly a dozen other blind people in Victoria master their handicaps.

He is Alan Browning, 2048 Meadow Place, who became blind in 1944, and now helps supervise the Canadian National Institute for the Blind workshop on Blanshard Street.

Mr. Browning, working with a "sighted" supervisor, John Bartlett, 950 Tulip, does the basic carpentry work required before wood can be turned over to nearly a dozen sightless craftsmen who make footstools and weave baskets. He also helps

'Police Waving Guns'

Frisking Motorists 'Normal Procedure'

EDMONTON (CP) — An of the incident, police and citizens had been alerted to watch for a prisoner who had escaped a few days before from a Calgary district jail.

Police began looking for the two men after receiving a telephone call from two youths at a service station.

Ronald Kearns and Christy McDevitt, the businessmen, lodged formal complaints that they were frisked at gunpoint "just like in the movies."

The two claimed they were driving west of Calgary when they were stopped on the hill at Cochrane, Alta., by two policemen waving their guns. They said they were ordered out of the car with their hands up and frisked.

The policemen then searched their car, the men said.

Supt. Cruickshank, officer in charge of RCMP criminal investigation in Alberta, said that after questioning witnesses and the corporal and constable against whom the complaints were laid, officials found the two policemen acted according to police procedure.

He explained that at the time

Sentiment 'Cements' Countries

TORONTO (CP) — The immense power of emotional and sentimental ties are the backbone of the British Commonwealth, Viscount Hallifax of London said Friday night.

"The cement of the Commonwealth is not only, or even primarily, economic," the lord president of the Privy Council and chairman of Britain's Conservative party told the Canadian Bar Association at its annual dinner.

"I believe that we are too slow to recognize, perhaps in a sense too shy to assert, the immense power of emotional and sentimental ties."

Woman Fined $140 for Killing 'Insolent' Black

PARY, South Africa (Reuters) — A 20-year-old white mother was fined £50 ($140) for killing an African woman after the judge said he took into account that the servant had been "insolent."

Mrs. Marie de Wet was found guilty of shooting the 28-year-old African woman in the stomach and warned by the judge to be careful of firearms in the future.

Science Beating Secrecy

GENEVA (AP) — The second atoms-for-peace conference ended Saturday with delegates counting three major achievements:

1. New victories against "the sickness of secrecy."

2. New co-operative proposals to assure safety in the atomic age, while speeding its development.

3. The reaping of a harvest of new knowledge, while sowing seeds for stimulating new ideas.

RUMBLE OF CONFLICT

The 13-day conference also was sparked at times with rumbles of conflict—particularly over U.S. proposals to use H-bombs for peacetime jobs, such as blasting out new harbors.

In a major step, the United States, Britain and Russia stripped the secrecy from all their research to control the H-bomb reaction for peaceful power—and learned they had all been working along much the same lines.

This was a major fruit of the meeting attended by 6,300 participants from 68 nations, said Professor Francis Perrin of France, conference president.

LINGERING, INFECTIOUS

But he cautioned that "secretiveness is a lingering and infectious sickness, and relapses are possible."

Delegates of East and West called for closer co-operation among scientists in solving specific problems.

Some urged international agreements to assure safety of A-power plants, arrangements for payment of damages in the unlikely event radioactive gases wafted over cities and countries, and establishment of safeguards to dispose safely of the dangerous radioactive ashes produced in plants.

MORE EFFICIENCY

The harvest of knowledge included details of designs for more efficient A-power—advances in using radioactive tracer atoms in medicine, agriculture and industry—evidence that radiation danger to heredity may not be so dangerous as believed—"daylight breaking" in solving the thorny problem of safe underground storage of radioactive wastes.

Who's More Qualified, Honey?

Mae West May Offer Advice to Lovelorn

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Mae she finds that her husband is running around with another man? West, who invented sex and tell him the truth, soon may be airing her views on that fascinating subject over television.

The ageless "come up and see me some time" siren, famous as Diamond Lil, is negotiating with a TV station to do an advice-to-the-lovelorn program.

"Offhand, honey," she said. "I don't think of anyone more qualified for the job. Besides, I am at educational-TV."

Just to show she is still in her form, she told how she would answer a sample question to wit: what's the best way to hold a man?

"In your arms, honey, in your arms."

Miss West spoke from her classic stage and movie position: reclining on a white chaise lounge in her living room.

Her hair was just as platinum-colored, curly and long as ever. At the age of 66, she looked half her age in a beige-and-white low-cut house gown and flimsy beige stockings.

She still has a figure-eight figure. She still doesn't drink or smoke.

In her sultry broadway drawl, she explained how she manages to stay on top in show business: "You've got to know the ground rules," she said. "For instance, love thy neighbor but not thy neighbor's husband."

Then she answered some more sample questions that might arise on her show.

Q. Should a girl tell a man everything before she marries him?

A. She should tell him everything that someone else may tell him first.

Q. What should a wife do if

Alexander the Great, king of Macedonia, received some of his education from the Greek philosopher Aristotle.

A. Let me see the other secret weapon, honey. A girl should always try to be loaded with it. She can't do without her beau if her mother objects.

A. I know it may sound funny coming from me—but modern movie stars, she said, that they don't play up their sex appeal as much as in the old days.

"They try to be too average—cooking, washing and all that," she said.

Can she cook? "Nobody ever asked me to," she drawled.

Tin Pan Alley Sings For Kiddies in Love

By JIM TAYLOR

The lovesmiths of Tin Pan Alley are suffering from a bad case of the TV's, a disease for which there seems to be no cure.

For the uninitiated, TV stands for Too Young, which used to be a song title and is now a song writer's downhill path to a golden record. The formula for success, as Nat "King" Cole proved when he made the original record, is simple.

STOCK MIXTURE.

You take two teen-agers, mix in large portions of undying love, add some parents who don't understand the situation Blend these for three choruses, add a deep bass voice for background and presto, you've got a hit love song.

Tin Pan Alley experts recognize this and are still on the gravy train after three years. Latest example is "She Was Only 17" by Marty Robbins.

General theme of these songs is "We're madly in love and everybody laughs and says we switched to Columbia Records when we're 12." In love songs like "Little Things Mean A Lot," the one that gave her her big break... a time instrumental offering by Cosy Cole that is rapidly reaching hit status in some parts of the U.S. . . . "Look Who's Blue" is a mediocre offering by Don Gibson, who tries without success to get the "Oh Lonesome Me" sound... latest release by the Four Coins is a good ballad entitled "Wendy, Oh Wendy" . . . Patience and Prudence, their weak little voices beetled up with an echo chamber, have recorded a so-so version of "All I Do Is Dream Of You" or Liberty.

Any day now we can expect a hit record called "Let's Elope Around the Block, I'm Not Allowed to Cross the Street." Another cinch hit will be "Tricycle Built For Two."

The Capitol Record people are chortling over one of their LP's, that has unexpectedly become one of the big sellers.

"The Kingston Trio" album, featuring "Three Jolly Coachmen," "Green Peppers" and the now-famous "Tom Dooley," is selling faster than a lot of single discs. The "Dooley" cut has become so popular it was released as a single soon after the LP came out.

NEW RELEASES: Peter Prado has followed his smash hit, "Patricia," with another solid instrumental offering, "Paris" . . . Kitty Kallen has LONDON (Reuters)—Experiments by Soviet researchers have shown that there are some new drugs which can save animals exposed to normally fatal doses of radiation, the Soviet news agency Tass said yesterday.

The agency said scientists are searching for means to prevent and treat radiation disease.

Wagon Train Seeks 'Refuge' In Curling Rink

Early morning motorists may think for protection from the Indians started today when they see wagons, and while a camp fire there—house-drawn—covered burns in the middle several men in wagons, with Indian arrows stuck out from between the sideboards, riding into Victoria "dough" pancakes for the curious along the trail from Nanaimo.

Bill Baddeley's replica of a wagon train are real. They late 19th-century community, now being set up inside the rink, boasts a jail complete with patrons, authentic blacksmith, barber shops complete with sideburns, a piano-player with handlebar mustache, a general store selling mainly the hardware that kills, and a Golden Nugget Saloon.

The wagons are part of Bill Baddeley's Frontier Ghost Town, which will be housed at the rink from Wednesday through Oct. 1, as a centennial project of the Victoria Gazebo Shrine Club.

"Ghost Town Bill" last night estimated some 750,000 persons saw his show during its "run" at a department store in Vancouver in the centre of the city.

And, prospectors won't have to pack their gear high into the mountains to find gold starting Wednesday, they can pan nuggets right there in the stockade. Ghost Town Bill and his son Frontier Sam have designed their own bronze nuggets which people can actually pan.

Government Takes Over Gas Checks

The provincial government will assume gas distribution inspection services throughout British Columbia on Oct. 1.

The service will be free of cost to municipalities which at present employ their own inspection services. Victoria city council is expected to save between $5,500 and $6,000 each year.

One gas inspector will be stationed in Victoria to cover Vancouver Island. The office will be expanded as the use of gas increases.

Trout, Bass Crest Winners

Fishermen who had to battle for August crests in the three salmon divisions of The Daily Colonist King Fisherman Contest—found the going much easier in the trout and bass sections.

Lists compiled yesterday showed that it took only a one-pound, 10-ounce trout for one of the 25 monthly crests. Trout proved so scarce that only 11 crests were given out.

Lou Williams of 2990 Granite led the bass division with a three-pound, 10-ounce fish caught in Prospect Lake and weighed in at Lakeside Store.

Leader in trout division was Cliff Marketish, 3320 Hillside, who landed a four-pound, 14-ounce fish in Cowichan Lake. It was weighed in at Central Meat Market.

Employers, Too, Should Adjust 'Older' Pensions

By HARRY YOUNG
Colonist Business Editor

Industrial unrest in B.C., which has made 1958 a sorry chapter of strikes and strike threats, is a serious enough matter to all those who have an interest in the Canadian economy at heart.

But to the unfortunate who during the war there was no one living on fixed pensions, the change because a moratorium on ever-growing wage level and the duration.

The banker who retired before 1945 on a pension based on a salary of perhaps $4,000 is hopelessly out of it with a year ago acknowledged the banker retiring from the same situation by increasing the pension of its veterans so that a pension based on a salary of they might continue to live close to the standard which had originally been set for them.

However, many other pensioners are not so lucky. They are those who have retired after life-long service with commercial and industrial institutions.

TOTALLY INSUFFICIENT

Most of those who retired before the end of the Second World War, and certainly all those who retired before it are today finding their pension payments — adequate when they went into retirement — totally insufficient to keep body and soul together. Many of them would be in even more parlous state if the government had not increased the national over-70 pension rate.

NO PROVISION

Unfortunately few private pension plans make provision for a state of inflation which brings down the purchasing value of the dollar at a rate impossible to predetermine. It is one of the pension plan weaknesses for which the experts apparently have not yet found a solution.

So the prospects for company pensioners is not particularly reassuring.

CHARTERED BANKS

There is the case of the chartered banks, all of whom have been pioneers in the superannuation of their staffs for many years.

Today there are probably many hundreds of former bank employees who retired before 1945 whose pensions are now inadequate.

Before the war bank salaries were probably not more than half what they are today, and B.C. manager Jack Sheffield.

'Harms Men'

Rumors Boycott Beef

RIO DE JANEIRO (Reuters)

— Many men in Brazil are refusing to eat beef because they fear it will affect their virility.

In some cities and country areas, the consumption of beef has dropped by between 40 per cent and 80 per cent since rumors spread that cattle were being treated with female hormones to fatten them.

Official denials so far have not persuaded the men to return to their "beef," normally a favorite meat dish among Brazilians.

KATE BUTCHERS

It seems that the panic was started by a disgruntled butcher at Gabriel Dr. Paha, a small town in Espírito Santo State. Put out of business by a price-cutting competitor, he alleged that the meat business was no good because "they are using a vaccine to fatten the cattle, and this contaminates the meat and causes disturbances in the people who eat beef."

The story grew as it passed from mouth to mouth, from provincial newspaper to city newspaper, until by the time it made headlines in Rio de Janeiro and São Paulo, the "contaminated beef" was said to cause not only impotence but even to produce a change of sex in men.

SALES DROP

Within a few days, meat sales in Rio and São Paulo had dropped by 40 per cent and in the smaller cities by more than that. At the same time, a black market appeared in pork, goat meat, fish, poultry and eggs. Prices soared.

Some butchers' shops, in desperation, put up signboards reading: "We sell only cow and goat. No beef."

DEALS UNHEEDED

The public health authorities issued denial after denial. All in vain. Brazilian skeptics continued to boycott beef, and sought confirmation of their fears in the strangest ways. They cited the menu of an official banquet for John Foster Dulles, the United States secretary of state, during his recent visit. It contained caviar, shrimp and chicken, but no beef.

The defence lawyer James Proudfoot told the magistrate, the business operated by the two men would suffer if both were sent to jail. He said the younger Taylor's wife was expecting.

The defence lawyer said the older Taylor had been in trouble once for fighting "32 years ago," the son had a clean slate.

The two men had admitted to battling with Const. James Ramsay as he checked a car in bushes off Wilson Street, early Thursday.

Evidence showed the bull, taken from the Ivor Mabberley farm, had been dragged "as prank" by a steel cable attached to the rear of the truck.

Policeman apparently stumbled to its death when the truck moved too quickly.

Two young naval ratings pleaded guilty in city police court yesterday to stealing accessories from cars parked in a lot within a few yards of the police station, early the same day.

FACTS about the LONGSHORE STRIKE in British Columbia

Since August 21st, a strike by some 1300 longshoremen, members of the International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, has tied up all deepsea water-borne freight movement through British Columbia ports.

This is the first strike in 23 years against the Shipping Federation of British Columbia, the employing body which hires longshoremen and bargains collectively with their Union in behalf of shipping, stevedoring and wharf companies. Because of the effect of this dispute on the public and on shippers through B.C. ports, some explanations of how the strike occurred and of events to date are here presented British Columbia deepsea longshoremen are amongst the highest earners in Canada's labor force. They are presently paid a base rate of $2.57 per hour. The average earnings of the members of the Union from April, 1957, to April, 1958, was $445.00 per month; their average hours 33 per week.

Longshoremen at Montreal and Saint John, N.B., are paid a base rate of $2.02; Halifax, N.S., and Quebec, P.Q., $1.92; Hamilton, Ont., $1.55.

British Columbia deepsea longshoremen since 1953 have had a pension plan paid for entirely by the Shipping Federation. This plan pays at age 65 Pension Benefits of $60.00 a month after 30 or more years' service; $50.00 after 25 years' service; $40.00 after 20 years' service; $30 after 15 years' service. Eastern Canadian longshoremen have an employer-paid pension plan which pays $35.00 per month pension at age 65 after 25 or more years' service; no pension for less than 25 years' service.

B.C. longshoremen asked that the existing pension plan be changed to a contributory type plan paying increased pensions. In 1957, after detailed study, the Federation offered the Union a contributory type plan paying increased pensions. This plan compared favorably with any of the major industrial pension plans in Canada, and was more generous than most. The Union's Committee rejected this offer.

Subsequently, the Federation offered them further concessions on pensions but the Union's Committee continued to reject the plan."

On August 21st, hoping to avert a strike, the Federation's Committee offered to recommend even further concessions on pensions. The Union's Committee rejected this offer, too, and called the strike on only two hours' notice.

Along with demands for improved pensions, the Union asked changes in the working agreement. These included a wage increase of 6½ cents per hour or 24%, a costlier vacation plan, paid named holidays and a number of alterations in working procedures which, if granted, would mean greater costs and/or further restrictive practices that would slow down vessel loading and unloading.

Throughout negotiations and later in conciliation the Union held to its demands despite the fact that ocean shipping is in its worst slump since 1933 . . . there are more ships laid up throughout the world than at any time since the Great World Depression . . . and despite the fact that the longshoremen are doing well financially and have been fairly treated by their employers over the years.

The Federation tried to have the highly specialized and important subject of pensions removed from the dispute and placed with a separate joint committee, with the hope that progress could be made on solving the other issues. The Union, refusing to do this, has made pensions the chief strike issue.

To settle the dispute and have work resumed as quickly as possible the Federation wired the Federal Minister of Labor, Honorable Michael Starr, the day following the beginning of the strike, offering to have the dispute arbitrated. This offer was rejected by the Minister and the Union.

Again on September 2nd the Federation suggested to the Minister of Labor that a special mediator experienced in the field of industrial pensions be appointed to endeavor to resolve the key pension issue.

On September 10th, the Shipping Federation was informed by the Minister of Labor that he had appointed Eric Taylor as an Industrial Enquiry Commission. The Minister was advised by the Federation that it welcomes this appointment, which makes possible a full study of the complex pension issue as well as other matters in dispute.

A second attempt by a Red convoy of Nationalist supply ships, sailing into Quemoy, failed yesterday Saturday, to land fuel and needed supplies on the fort-harbor bases of Quemoy.

Sincerity Doubted

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — President Eisenhower was told the Chinese Communists' offer of assistance in the defense of the island of Formosa was "not to be relied upon" because it was "not sincere," the State Department said.

In a reply to Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev, the president said he hoped the Chinese Communists' offer of assistance in the defense of the island of Formosa would not be moderation on the part of the Soviet Union.

Eisenhower said the real question is whether the Chinese Reds will seek to conquer the entire island and then force the use of force, as they did in Korea, or whether they will accept the vital requisite of world peace and order."

State Dept. spokesman Edward T. Schlesinger, however, said while a dangerous situation exists the U.S. will not withdraw its military support of the Chang Kai-shek government in Formosa and neighboring islands.

Review of the events of Quemoy to Red MiG jet bases.

BURNING SHORT

But supplies increased were roughly short in Quemoy. So ships have made up to 20 landings since the last daylight convoy to Quemoy.

Sources close to top Nationalist military leaders indicated that the Nationalists are on the verge of bombing Red MiG bases on the coast of Formosa.

In the first landing the ships stayed on the beaches for 25 minutes and managed to unload a mattering of supplies. Then the Reds poured in 700 shells in 30 minutes by Nationalist gun.

In the second attempt two anti-aircraft batteries dropped in 10,000 rounds of high explosive shells after the ships had hit the beach. A Nationalist source said no great amount of supplies had been landed on the second try.

With the Reds tightening their blockade of Quemoy day by day the Nationalists were reported yesterday to be

Oak Bay's popular boat ramp will be banned for use from 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. each day, Reeve Fred Norris said Wednesday. However, fishermen still have the use of the alternative ramp at Cattle Point. During the fishing season hundreds of boats are launched by the Oak Bay ramp each month and neighbors complained of disturbance and noise during night. (Colonist photo by Bud Kurnin)

MARNE'S Jaquette left Britain yesterday with the weight confidence of one who has won the race.

"I don't feel like performing," I don't feel like performing," he said, "but I'm lower down. I've had a long time to think about it, as when I was a kid. Only now I realize I have acquired the quality of judgment."

I stated in a letter in the journal section of his luxury motor home 20 minutes from the centre of Paris that the race had been decided for now, words to the expense of the other horses in the race. I am not the only one to do this, but I am the first to do it in this race.

A few days ago, I had a chance to speak with the manager of the race track, the Hippodrome de Longchamp, and he told me that the race would be won by a horse named "Jaquette".

Cattle Drive Family Affair

BELOWED to be "the long-est and longest cattle drive in Texas," the cattle drive from Marfa Ranch, 300 miles east to Abilene. This is probably the most remarkable ranch in the old country bounded by mountains, in which Phillips' cattle, long ago found while hunting, now abound.

For a few days remained at Mineral Point, snaggled along the Agassiz Range, passed over the wagon road from Lake of the Woods to the Red River, and Panhandle country was never seen so well. A man Phil lived near by, who had a trap line in the hills, a round lake between the two, and how he used to catch deer! The east folks gaze on him as a legendary man from back of beyond!

It was the only time that I saw his wife and there he gave them to me as if it was a rag and I was told later on that she created the impression of a competent Philologist.
